Development Wheels™ explained

a guide to choosing your wheels and other publications and materials

What is a Development Wheel™?

Development Wheels™ are a unique, popular resource, which offer information, ideas and guidance in an easily understood and accessible format to support individual child development and parenting. Recognising that no two children develop in the same way or do things at the exact same time, there are suggestions on what the child might be able to do and tips on how you might help in their development.

Our standard Development Wheels™ are easy to use. The inner part of the 'wheel' is rotated to reveal the section you need to view, with information on both sides of the 'cut-out' window on the front and back of each wheel. They are about 230mm diameter, and are laminated to last longer.

The wheels are written by practitioners, authors and specialists in their field. This ensures that they meet the needs of not only parents/carers but also practitioners, teachers, health visitors, childminders, students – in fact anyone working in early years, education, child development, health and family support.

Our Super-size practitioner Development Wheels™ are 440mm diameter and are also laminated. They hold much more detailed information to support practitioners and other professionals within a setting, children's centre or group.

The first Super-size Development Wheels available are the three Early Years Foundation Stage wheels.

This set contains all of the information contained within the 48 page DEVELOPMENT MATTERS booklet.

This folder provides more information on all of our wheels to help you decide which ones are right for you.
